With a Vote of 356 to 244

By Anthony Lewis LONDON, Oct. 28 (NYT).—By a vote of 356 to 244, the House of Commons tonight approved British membership in the European Common Market.

The majority of 112 far exceeded most predictions. It was a tremendous victory for Prime Minister Edward Heath, for the Conservative government and for the Labor pro-marketeers who stood out against their party's

The Labor marketeers provided a big bloc of 69 votes for the motion. Mr. Heath lost only 39 Tories to the "no" lobby. That difference produced the big ma-jority. (See table.)

Harold Wilson, the Labor leader who once favored British entry, deepened the split in his party when he opened the last day of the six-day Commons debate on Europe this afternoon,

Mr. Wilson made an all-out attack on the terms negotiated by the Tories. Then, menacingly, he said a future Labor government would demand renegotiation of the terms-and take a Gaullist line of non-cooperation until the market agreed.

Mr. Heath wound up the debate tonight, the 176th member of the Commons to speak over the six days. Just before 10 p.m., over angry shouts from left-wing Laborites, he said with force:

"Many millions of people across the world will rejoice that Britain will be taking the rightful place in the true European unity that

There was the unmistakable air of a great occasion as members into the lobbies for the filed vote. In the gallery, a symbol of history, sat Jean Monnet, the man often called the father of the new Europe.

Mr. Momet, now R. Scars side has been behind the postwar measures of European integra-tion since the first such organization, the Coal and Steel Community. It was formed just 20 years ago, by France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Britain stood aloof then. And it remained outside when the same Six went on in 1957 to form the European Economic Community, or Common Market.

The British attitude through those years seemed to represent what Charles de Gaulle said Winston Churchill once told him: Every time we must choose bethey are likely to have much more help from the Labor party, with many Labor pro-marketeers returning to the party line of opafter declaring for Euposition rope in principle, Observers expect a long fight over the legislation, probably continuing over months into next summer. The general belief is that Mr. Heath will push it through in the end, but along the way there could be some "damned close-run things," as Wellington said of Waterloo

If the remaining obstacles are overcome. Britain and the other three applicants will become members of a community of 10 on Jan. 1, 1973.

The big political question now, and perhaps remaining even after entry, is what a future Labor government would do about the Common Market if elected on the present Labor policy of angry opposition to the negotiated terms of entry. It was against that background that Mr. Wilson's speech today seemed so significant. He spoke at great length but did not arouse the House until a Conservative asked him what a future Labor government's attitude toward Europe would be. Mr. Wilson said no Parliament could bind its successor, but he did recognize that a treaty once signed would carry weight. He then spoke of what a Labor government taking office after British entry would do.

"We would immediately give notice," he said, "that we would not accept the terms negotiated by the Conservatives. "If the community then refused to negotiate, or if negotiations were to fail, we would sit down amicably and discuss the situation with them." That apparent anticlimax brought mocking laughter from the Conservative benches, but Mr. Wilson had saved the sting for the end of his reply. He con-"We should make it clear from that moment that our posture, like that of the French after 1958, would be rigidly directed toward the pursuit of British interests, and all other decisions and actions in relation to the

U.S. Trade Registers a Surplus

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (WP). -The U.S. balance of trade registered a surplus of $265.4 million in September, reversing a five-month trend of deficits that played a role in President Nixon's decision Aug. 15 to establish a new economic policy.

Officials were quick to deny that the surplus had been a product of the new policy, which they said has not been in effect long enough to have had an impact on foreign trade. Moreover, both imports and exports—each a record-were affected by dock strikes on the East, West and

Gulf Coasts.

The trade surplus, officials said, could probably be traced to in-creasing shipments in anticipation of the East and Gulf Coast dock strikes. According to as- a part-time adviser to Sen. Ed-sistant Secretary of Commerce mund Muskie, D., Maine, said the Harold Passer, the West Coast strike-in its third month in September—"probably affected imports more adversely than ex-Ports.

The export surplus was a cheerful note in an economic situation dominated by uncertainty, especially over business prospects during Phase 2 of the wage-price control program.

In a speech here to the National Economists Club, Arthur M. Okun, a former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. said that recovery in the Phase 2 period "will come along very gradually." an assessment of prospects that matches the dominant mood of Wall Street.

economy was "stuck in the mud." He predicted that "we will have unemployment running between 51/2 and 6 percent for many months, and it will be well above percent all of next year." Adjusted for seasonal varia tions, U.S. exports rose to $4.510 billion in September, with imports at $4.245 billion. Over the first nine months of the year, the United States has a trade deficit of $670.7 million. Nixon administration officials expect a trade deficit for the full calendar year, the first since 1893, compared with a $2.7 billion surplus in 1970. A basic objective of the new economic policy is to transform the developing trade deficit into a surplus to cover other U.S. international payments. Secretary of the Treasury John Connally has stated this goal as a "swing" of $13 billion in the trade account—from at expected deficit of $5 billion annually to a surplus of $8 billion.

In his speech, Mr. Okun said that "the stock market is reflecting its uncertainties" and the feeling that Phase 2 "will be tougher" on big firms—those listed on the exchanges—than it will be on wages. He also reported that consumers have been just as hesitant to "come aboard" as stock market investors as they have been to spend generally. If there is no noticeable increase in consumer spending in the fourth quarter, Mr. Okun said.

EEC Victory in Parliament Not Sign of Public Approval

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON, Oct. 28 (NYT),-Prime Minister Heath once said that he could not take Britain into the Common Market without "the full-hearted consent" of its people and Parliament.

Even after tonight's House of Commons majority for entry, the question of public approval re-mains. For opinion polls in Britain show a continuing majority against the idea of going into

But the question is not a simple or straightforward one. What Britons say about the Common Market depends on exactly what they are asked. And the relationship between Parliament and public opinion raises its own philosophic difficulties,

Years ago, after Britain first applied to join the European community, polls consistently showed a public majority in favor. But for the last several years, the results have been the other way.

Most experts lay the change to British resentment and frustration at the two French vetoes of the application. But the negative polls have persisted since President Pompidou changed the French position last spring and Britain at last reached agreement with the Common Merket.

Last summer, as the government began a big campaign for public support, the polls started moving toward the pro-market side. But support apparently reached a peak, dropped back a bit and then stabilized.

The latest Gallup poll, published last week in the Daily Telegraph, showed 32 percent for entry, 51 against and 17 don't knows. Two months earlier the figures were 33, 47 and 21 percent-little change.

A Louis Harris poll, in the Daily Express, yesterday was similar: 30 percent for entry, 49 against, 21 don't knows.

But the Harris poll showed one of the oddities noted by all students of opinion on this issue: When asked whether they thought Britain would in fact go into the community, 84 percent of the same sample said "yes."

The Harris Poll also asked people whether they thought parliamentary opponents of the market should go on fighting if they lost tonight's Commons vote. The result was 51 percent for the opponents to give up. 37 to go on resisting, 12 don't knows.

Another curious result showed up in a poll taken for the Financial Times, by the British Market Research Bureau.

When asked whether they "personally" favored entry, those polled voted 52 to 35 percent against. But when asked whether Britain ought to join "in the national interest," they voted 49 percent for and 40 against.

In any event, the long constitutional tradition in Britain is that issues are decided by Parliament, not popular referendum. In the tradition of Edmund Burke, the great 18th - century Conservative, members are expected to do more than slavishly follow their constituents' views.

The Labor party leader, Harold Wilson, who has turned against the market, nevertheless agrees with Mr. Heath that it is an issue to be decided by Parliament, not by referendum.

Mr. Wilson argues that there should be a fresh general election before the final decision. But the experts see difficulties in that In an early election, the Common Market would not by any means be the only issue. Mr. Wilson and the Labor party would also attack the Conservative government for rising prices, unemployment and other problems.

The conclusion of many observers is the puzzling one that, in the British tradition, there is co clear way to test public opinion politically on such a great issue. Each of the other three countries applying to join the market—Ireland, Norway and Denmarkplans to hold a referendum.

10-Year Common Market Battle En

LONDON, Oct. 28 (NYT).—It was on July 31, 1961, that Britain began the decade-long struggle to join the Common Market. On that date, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan told the House of Commons that the Conservative government intended to make the application.

There are great risks from failure and great opportunities to be gained by success," Mr. Macmillan told the House. His motion was approved by a vote

The man chosen to negotiate terms of entry was Edward Heath, a former chief whip. Given the title of Lord Privy Seal, Mr. Heath went to Paris Oct. 10, 1961, and presented the formal application to the community's members, saying:

"We desire to become full, whole-hearted and active members of the European community in its widest sense and to go forward with you in the building of Europe."

For 15 months, Mr. Heath carried on painstaking talks, flying from Loudon to Brussels like a commuter, trying to overcome the obstacles to an agreement. Accord in principle had been reached on many issues, including one of the thorniest-Britain's obligations to its Commonwealth—when the boom was lowered.

On Jan. 14, 1963, at a news conference at the Elysée Palace, President Charles de Gaulle, of France, made clear his opposition to the British application.

"England is insular..." he said. "It has in all its doings very marked and very original habits and traditions . . . differapparent reference to the long ing profoundly from those of the Continentals."

Two weeks later, Britain abandoned attempts to negotiate entry. Its acceptance as a new member required unanimous approval of all existing members of the EEC, under terms of the Treaty of Rome, which established the community five years earlier.

For three years, Britain marked time. In April 1966, the Labor government of Harold Wilson announced that Britain "would be ready to enter the European Eccnomic Community provided that essential British and Commonwealth interests were safeguard-

British ministers conducted preliminary soundings with EEC governments for the rest of that year. In the early months of 1967, Prime Minister Wilson and Foreign Secretary George Brown toured the capitals of Europe.

On May 2, 1967, Mr. Wilson announced to the House of Commons his government's intention renew the application for membership of the EEC. His statement stressed that "the govemment's purpose derives above all from our conviction that Europe is now faced with the opportunity of a great move forward in political unity and that we can—and indeed we must— play our full part in it."

decision was again overwhelmingly approved-488 votes to 62. The renewed application was delivered to the Common Market headquarters May 11. Five days later, Gen, de Gaulle, at a news conference, delivered what, in effect, was his second veto. He spoke for 20 minutes about the "formidable obstacles" in the way of Britain's entry. "...One can easily understand," Gen de Gaulle said, "why Eng-land which is not a continental country, which, because of its own island status, has faraway commitments, and which is tied to the United States by all sorts of special arrangements, could not merge into a community of fixed directions and rigorous rules."

Despite efforts by the other five EEC member nations to reopen negotiations for British membership, it was not to be until Gen, de Gaulle resigned April 28, 1969. Even then, many at the intentions of his Georges Pompidon. It was not until May of year that Mr. Pompiden sin tions became clear and the was at last, open to Britain.

The scene was the git char in the Elysee Palace, where de Gaulle had pronounce vetoes. Now President Point was there with Prime in Heath, speaking to the president extended meeting. "Many people thought Britain was not and did not to become European." Chief Terms in the Accord By Britain and the EEC

These were some of the main terms for British entry the Common Market.

• Financial Contributions -Britain accepted a first year contribution of 8.64 percent of the community's budget. This would represent a net payment to the community budget of about £100 million. The British contribution would rise to 18.92 percent in the fifth year of membership. The community budget is currently running at £1,250 million annually.

New Zealand—Imports of dairy products from this Commonwealth country, a major supplier to Britain, will drop by no more than 29 percent by the fifth year of British membership in an enlarged Common Market. Adequate safeguards for New Zealand ere a major bargaining point in the long negotiations.

• Sugar—Developing nations of the Commonwealth who rely on sugar exports will have these exports guaranteed until 1974. The Common Market has given assurances that thereafter the enlarged community will safeguard the interests of these countries in future agreements.

Commonwealth Countries-In general they have been given a choice between associate membership in the Common Market like the former French African territories, or special trade agree-

· A transitional period for Britain of five years was set for adaptation in the industrial and agricultural fields and to the community's rules regarding capital movements and fiscal harmonization.

• A technical agreement was reached on transitional arrangements for Britain in the field of industrial tariffs.

 Arrangements were agreed for several industrial products which Britain at present imports wholly or mainly duty free and where it appeared that the imosition of the common external tariff would mean a new charge on supplies to British industry. Sen. James L. Buckley said last night that the Soviet Union had developed a test version of a bomber powered by nuclear engines and capable of "remaining aloft for 90 days or more." Speaking at a dinner sponsored.

by the Navy League, the Conservative-Republican junior senator from New York warned that the development of such an aircraft would pose "serious implications to anti-submarine warfare, maritime surveillance and other strategic missions."

Sen. Buckley said that a similar American military program "was scrapped" by Robert S. McNamara when he was Secretary of Defense

New Appeal Likely

Reported in U.S. Court Won't Bar Amchitka Blast

A three-judge federal panel refused today to halt the government's plans to set off a fivemegaton nuclear device underground on the island of Amchitka off the coast of Alaska. Instead, the U.S. Court of Appeals here referred the matter to a lower court, where attorneys for conservation groups are likely In refusing to grant an immediate stay against the blast scheduled to go off within a week, the appeals court said it was dealing only with the issue of whether the government should be required to make public information which conservationists said would indicate environmental dangers from the explosion.

Petential Dangers

In dealing with the issue of re-ports which environmentalists said would show the potential dangers of the blast, the appeals court said the government must turn that information over to the

The Justice Department had argued that President Nixon had a right to keep those reports private under the legal concept of executive privilege.

It would appear that conservation groups, such as the Sierra Club, will now have to appeal to the U.S. District Court to gain a reversal of Mr. Nixon's decision yesterday to go ahead with the blast.

Pentagon's Scientists Stress On-Site Nuclear Inspections

By Richard D. Lyons

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (NYT). Defense Department scientists told Congress yesterday that their research has shown that there still was need for on-site inspection to verify compliance with any ban on underground nuclear

They appeared before the Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy as it opened hearings to determine whether a treaty could now safely be negotiated that would ban underground tests without inspection. Some scientists and defense ex-perts outside the government have contended that technology was so advanced that underground nuclear testing could be detected without inspection. The current test-ban treaty bans all but underground tests.

The Pentagon scientists, led by Dr. John S. Foster jr., director research and engineering, and Dr. Stephen J. Lukasik, director of the Advanced Projects Agency, testified that, while great advances have been made in detecting underground tests in the last decade, it still was impossible to spot some types of detonations ranging up to 100 kilotons. That, they noted, is five times the explosive power of the atomic bomb that devastated Hiroshima.

The Soviet Union has balked at any agreement on a complete nuclear test ban in part because it is unwilling to accept the presence of foreign inspectors and instruments on its own soil. Onsite inspections, however, have been demanded by the United States in disarmament negotiations in Geneva.

chemists about the existence of so-called islands of stability, meaning zones of chemical elements that do not disintegrate as quickly as the elements 102 to 105 that have already been discovered at Dubna." The synthesis of the so-called transuranium elements, radioactive elements beyond uranium in Dmitri I. Mendeleyey's original periodic table of elements, has turned into a competition between the Dubna Research Center, 60 miles north of Moscow on the upper Volga River, and the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at Berkeley, Calif.

Both Have Claims

Both laboratories have claimed priority in the discovery of elements 102 to 105, which are so short-lived as to be extremely difficult to detect. On theoretical grounds, it has been proposed that there exists an "island of stability" consisting of even heavier superelements that might have long lifetime, long enough perhaps to be found in nature in trace amounts. These superheavy transuranium elements would be those with atomic numbers 110 through 114. The Americans appear to be concentrating on the synthesis of element 110, the Russians on The acceleration of the xenon ions, now reported to have been achieved at Dubna, has been viewed as a first step in an experiment that would smash a beam of xenon ions into a target of uranium or some other heavy material in an attempt to synthesize one of the superelements.

nec every day to Tolvo

Every day of the week there are at least three IAL flights to Tokyo from Europe. On some days, even four. For anyone about to visit the Far East, we fly your way. Frequently.
And delightfully. Because our hostesses treat you more like a guest than a passenger. Which is natural in Japan. So natural, in fact, that the Japanese language needs only one word, o-kyaku, for both.

Brezhnev Assails Israelis During Visit to Marseilles

-Soviet party leader Leonid L Brezhnev charged today "Israeli aggression is poisoning the atmosphere" in the Mediterranean.

His remark at a luncheon in his honor appeared to be an indirect reply to a plea from Gaston Dafferre, mayor of this Mediterranean port, for ethnic and religious freedom in the Soviet Union.

Mr. Brezhnev, on the fourth day of his first visit to a Western nation, flew to Marseilles from Paris for a break in lengthy rounds of political and economic talks with President Georges

Fare Accord By Airlines Still in Doubt

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, Oct. 28 (NYT) —After three days of intensive negotiations here, the outcome of the attempt by 25 airlines regularly flying the North Atlantic to set a new fare structure remained in doubt, an International Air Transport Associa-tion official said tonight.

H. Don Reynolds, assistant di-rector-general for traffic of the 107-airline trade organization, said there had been "a sincere and determined search by all" for a basis for the fares that would become effective on April 1.

But it was "still too early to predict the outcome," according to Mr. Reynolds, who is also con-ference chairman. He told re-porters that it might take from 3 to 10 days more to determine whether an accord could be reached.

The airlines are seeking a new package of fares to replace those established after more than six weeks of negotiations last summer at Montreal. The Montreal accord collapsed on Sept. 15 when Lufthansa, the West German airline, refused to ratify the proposed new fare structure on the ground that it was too compli-

The first two days of the discussions here were confined to a search for a general outline of a new fare package by senior executives of the 25 airlines.

The negotiations were concentrated today in a working group of 13 of the principal airlines that attempted to find the conditions for an excursion rate for an individual traveler that would be the lowest possible without en-dangering airline income from

The principal contention is between airlines that favor lower individual fares and those that seek cheap group fares as the best way to meet the challenge of charter carriers.

If the airlines fail to agree on a new fare structure, a price war can erupt on Feb. 1 unless governments intervene.

Death of Indian Held by Police Stirs S. Africans

JOHANNESBURG, Oct. 28 (Reuters).—Several leading South African churchmen today called for a judicial inquiry into the deaths of police detainees after the disclosure that an Indian man had fallen to his death yesterday from the 10th floor of police headquarters here.

The man, Ahmed Timol, a 30year-old schoolteacher, was de-tained at the weekend during nationwide security police raids on the homes of about 100 persons. He was the 14th person to die in security police detention during the last eight years.

The Anglican suffragan bishop of Cape Town, the Right Rev. John Carter, said today: "This death simply reinforces the growing public demand for a judicial inquiry into the methods of the security police. I am so shocked and amazed by this that I find it difficult to say anything. Comments sound trivial in comparison with what has happened." A police spokesman said yesterday that Mr. Timel had committed suicide by jumping from the 10th floor of the headquarters building in central Johannesburg. .

Queen Juliana Pays A Visit to Hamburg

HAMBURG, Oct. 28 (UPI).-Queen Julians of the Nether-lands and Prince Bernard toured the port city of Hamburg today in the third day of their state visit to West Germany.

Their plane managed to land at Hamburg from Bonn despite thick fog, which lifted later as the queen toured harbor installaand visited a pensioner couple in a city housing development.
Their visit to West Germany will end tomorrow.

MARSETILES, Oct. 28 (UPI). Pompidou. Those talks will resume tomorrow following a special request by Mr. Brezhnev to meet with Mr. Pompidou before what had been the final scheduled meeting Saturday. At a luncheon in the prefecture Mr. Brezhnev returned to the attack against Israel, which, he had charged in Paris last night, was "playing with fire."

"Unfortunately, it cannot be said that this will be the case for the time being since the situation in the Middle East due to the Israeli aggression is poisoning all the atmosphere in that part of the world," he said. Earlier, Mr. Brezhnev listened impassively in the city hall while Mr. Defferre, a Socialist, urged him to sign "a Franco-Soviet treaty which respects the prin-ciples you have enumerated with President Pompidou—nonintervention in the affairs of other countries and respect for ethnic and religious minorities." Mr. Pompidou has told the Russians that he would not sign such a

Despite heavy police security, minor incidents took place during his stay in Marseilles—all of them far from his sight, however. In one, demonstrators handing out anti-Brezhnev leaflets scuffled with police in the harbor area.

In Paris, an appeal from the "Parliamentary Action Committee in Favor of Soviet Jews" was signed by 26 deputies and 26 senators. It said Frenchmen believed "Jews of the Soviet Union have the right to opt for the country where they want to establish themselves, without their choice bringing on them tortures and persecutions."

Fidgets During Protest

Mr. Brezhnev flew to Marselles, France's second city, for his only trip outside Paris during his six-day visit.

Although he did not react to Mr. Defferre's appeal for a treaty, he had fidgeted in discomfort in the heat in the reception room while Mr. Defferre attacked the protocol for the one-day visit, arranged by the government.

Angered because he was not allowed to ride in Mr. Brezhnev's car from the airport, Mr. Defferre attacked the Gaullists as "little men of little means." Mr. Brezhnev looked up at the ceiling, twisted his hands behind his back and licked his lips while listening to the interpreter's ver-sion of Mr. Defferre's remarks. Mr. Defferre told his guest that the city elders who gathered around to welcome him had routed the Gaullists in the last city elections. He also asked Mr. Brezhnev for Soviet aid to build a subway system in the city. Mr. Brezhnev, in his reply.

steered carefully clear of getting involved in local French politics. in addition to crying, "Long live Franco - Soviet friendship," he praised cooperation between the two countries already agreed with Mr. Pompidou.

Meanwhile, in Paris, pro-government commentators, already angered by French Communist leader Georges Marchais's antigovernment remarks during Mr. Brezhnev's visit to the Lenin house yesterday, reacted with even more hostility to what they regarded as an attempt by Mr. Defferre to involve Mr. Brezhnev in French domestic politics to-

The sources said he would have talks with East German party leader Erich Honecker.

French Release U.S. Writer From Exile in Corsica

PARIS, Oct. 28 (IHT).—Pavel Tigrid, Czechoslovak writer sent into temporary exile in Corsica during Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's visit here, has been released on the personal intervention of Alain Poher, French Senate president, it was learned. Mr. Tigrid, 54, now a naturalized American, was one of 49 East Europeans flown to Corsica Saturday under police supervision. He was picked up for two works criticizing the fall of Alexander Dubcek, former Czechoslovak party leader, and the intervention in Prague by Warsaw Pact members led by the Soviet Union.

Mr. Poher intervened after reports in the press indicated that Mr. Tigrid is a law-abiding citizen who never participated in any demonstrations and did not intend to do so. The affair was brought to Mr. Poher's attention by friends of the author.

The opposition is counting on considerable support from the business community, labor unions, the press, and eventually some members of Mr. Sato's Liberal Democratic party. There is a clamor here for Japan to recognize the regime in Peking and thus end what many Japanese see as their isolation from other nations that have diplomatic relations with China. Economically, the Japanese want to increase their steadily expanding trade with the mainland.

Obligations Cited Confronted with this, Mr. Eato has been wavering. In the Diet today, he acknowledged that the regime in Peking has been internationally recognized as the government of China. But he maintains that Japan has obligations to the Nationalists on Taiwan that cannot be lightly disregarded.

Mr. Sato has centered his defense on the Japanese peace treaty with Nationalist China signed in 1952 to end World War II. That pact has been the basis for Japan's diplomatic and economic relations with Nationalist China and Mr. Sato has so far contended that it cannot be abrogated by Japan alone

Meantime, a senior official of the Foreign Ministry, in a briefing for foreign newsmen, hinted that Japan would shift diplomatic recognition from Taipei to Peking If the Communist government was willing to negotiate a normalization of relations.

Tsutomo Wada, who is the equivalent to an assistant secretary of state for public affai s, said that Japan no longer recognizes President Chiang Kai-shek's regime as the sole and legitimate government of China but only as the government of Tsiwan.

Brandt Calls Bonn's Record 'Not Bad' on Europe Defense

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (UPI) .-West Garman Chancellor Willy Brandt does not think American Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird was referring to Germany when he told a NATO meeting that some European allies were not contributing enough to the military defense of Western Eu-

"Of course, we have our own ideas about what might be necessary, and what is possible," Mr. Brandt said in a television interview taped Monday in Bonn and broadeast yesterday, "but I think if we compare our military activities... our contribution to the alliance with the contribution of others, our record is not bad."

Yesterday, in Brussels, West German Defense Minister Helmut Schmldt proposed in a meeting with Mr. Laird that Bonn pay several hundred million marks for the upkeep and modernization of American Army installations in Germany. The sum was reported today as $700 million a year for three years.

In his broadcast, Mr. Brandt went on to say that with West Ge many the problem was not only East-West relationships but also West-West relationships.

"Our friends," he said, "for understandable reasons do not like a situation... where our army would play the dominant role. This is understandable and this, in addition to other factors, influences our military activities."
He added that in the future Western Europe "will have to do

If a balance between Russia and America does not work out, he continued, "and if this balance should not remain the basis for possible discussions on the reduction of forces between the East and the West... this could contribute to a development which would strengthen Russian influence in this part of the world to a high degree... This would correspond not only with our interests, but also that of the United States."

"In any case," he said, "the chances to get fair discussions on the reduction of forces would be weakened if those discussions could not be developed from the basis of an effective NATO alliance-an effective NATO alliance, as things are now, for Tars to come "

NATO, he warned, would only be effective "if it includes some considerable U.S. contribution on the European mainland,"

In his first television interview since being awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. Mr. Brandt was asked by interviewer Walter Cronkite what he meant when he said the prize "imposed a high and binding obligation."
"Well, the words you've just

Berlin Talks Will Resume Next Week

Bahr Sees Progress In 28th Round

BERLIN, Oct. 28 (AP).-Essi and West German negotiators held intensive exchanges today on implementing the four-power Berlin accord and agreed to meet again Nov. 3 and 4 in Bonn, a joint communiqué announced.

The 28th round of talks, which lasted a total of 10 hours yesterday and today in East Berlin, concerned a transit traffic agreement, the communiqué said.

Issues Discussed

West German sources said the specific questions under discussion were traffic, customs and sealing of freight vehicles in transit across 110 miles of East German territory between West Germany and West Berlin, East and West Berlin representatives, when they meet again Nov. 3. will discuss visits for West Berliners through the wall.

There was no immediate word on progress in today's meeting between delegations led by Bonn State Secretary Egon Bahr and his East German counterpart Michael Kohl. Mr. Bahr reported yesterday that substantial progress had been achieved.

The Bahr-Kohl talks are simed at working out mechanics of the Berlin accord signed Sept. 3 by ambassadors of the United States, Britain, France and the

A tax-free 1972 Volvo looks rather like a tax-free 1971 Volvo:

Until you step inside.

At Volvo we don't believe in change for the sake of change — that clean, distinctive body shape of the 140 and 164 series looks just as ageless as before. But we never relax. Constantly we look for ways to improve on what is already an exceptionally safe, comfortable and endurable car. That's why every 1972 Volvo has dozens of new comfort and safety features. And nearly all of them are inside: where it matters most.

The new 164 E and 1800 ES

For 1972 there's a new version of the 6-cylinder, 3-litre Volvo 164 — the 164 E with 175 hp SAE and electronic fuel injection for instant response, higher top speed and safer overtaking. Then there's the new 1800 ES fastback with a roomy luggage compartment that makes it an excellent car for long trips. In common with the 140 series, which also includes one version with electronic fuel injection, the 1972 Volvo 164 has better lumbar support, improved automatic gearbox with floor mounted gear lever and a re-designed dashboard - all for your comfort.

The New Diplomacy

relations between nations-has always been an elaborate ritual, punctuated by improvisations, Samuel Pepys recounts the savage brawl that broke out between the retinues of the French and Spanish ambassadors for precedence in a London procession, an event that left several dead and a long train of international repercussions. Even in the 19th century, when protocol seemed to have crystalized for all time, a war between France and Prussia was precipitated by an informal discussion between the envoy of Louis Napoleon and the King of Prussia on the sidewalks of a little watering place-and the edited account of it given the public by Bismarck. But today's diplomacy is exploring new avenues altogether.

It is not only that heads of state and governments are wandering at large about the world, raising as many questions as they answer (especially for the police of the host states); a rapprochement between two great powers-China and the United Statesbegan with an invitation to a ping-pong tournament. And new tensions between Washington and Havana have been caused by the uninvited presence of a group of Cuban sugar technologists in New Orleans.

The last was a curious plece of impudence -curious, especially, when one considers the nature of the Cuban state. An international meeting on sugar was scheduled for New Orleans. Cubans asked to be admitted, and were refused visas because the meeting was not sponsored by the United Nations or one sistance in bringing peace in our time.

Diplomacy—the business of conducting of its affiliated organizations. But the Cubans came anyway, and refused to leave. on the ground that the United States could not impede Cuba's "access" to the con-

> One can only imagine what might have happened had this particular shoe been on the other foot, and the military parade of bearded Cubans that would have marched off any intruding Americans to the calabozo, But in the United States the Cuban group is only an embarrassment, as it eats box lunches in a motel and passes out cigars to newspapermen. The Cubans seem to be enjoying themselves more than the State Department over their innovative attempt to rewrite international law.

Given this little affair on its doorstep, the United States might well be more tolerant of the antics of the smaller and less civil nations in the General Assembly, after the China vote. Mr. Nixon, speaking with the voice of Ronald Ziegler, need not have placed himself in the position of an elderly schoolmaster, chiding the unruly elements of a class that had gotten out of hand, when he rebuked that "shocking demonstration." Diplomacy has lost a good deal of its dignity on all levels, including that of Ronald Ziegler. But loss of dignity is a very poor reason for bolstering the cause of those thrifty American senators and congressmen who find the local pork barrel of government contracts more appetizing than appropriations for an international organization which may-just may-be of major as-

United Nations intervention-but not on the terms proposed by Islamabad.

President Yahya Khan of Pakistan has appealed to Secretary General Thant to mediate between the two countries and has suggested that United Nations observers be posted on both sides of the border between East Pabistan and India to supervise a mutual withdrawal of forces. These would be helpful developments, but they would not solve the basic issues threatening South Asian peace—persisting military repression in East Pakistan and the continuing flight of refugees into India.

The unprecedented flow of destitute refugees constitutes, in effect, a bloodless aggression against India-although the campaign of terror in East Pakistan which precipitates this flow is by no means blood-

It is not just a question of the heavy financial burden that an estimated 9.4 million refugees impose on India's struggling economy. The graver threat is to the political and social stability of India, particularly in refugees are concentrated. Unless the refugee

> If UN intervention on the subcontinent is to be effective, therefore, it is essential that it be directed at the roots of the problem. Any mediation effort by U Thant or his representative should be in the first instance between the Pakistani government and leaders of the outlawed Awami League. the elected representatives of the people of East Pakistan-not between Islamabad and New Delhi, Any call for a mutual withdrawal of forces must be accompanied by vigorous efforts to repatriate the refugees under conditions of justice and security.

Although India is in an excellent position to press for broader UN action of this sort, the Indian government so far has been strangely cool to any intervention by the world organization. Prime Minister Gandhi's recent plea for restraint on the part of her people would be more reassuring if India's military buildup along the Pakistani borders were tempered by a more positive Indian volatile West Bengal, where most of the response to Pakistan's diplomatic initiatives.

International Opinion

Peking in the UN

The important thing is that the seating of Peking ends a certain conception of the UN as an international arbiter. Already paralyzed in some decisive circumstances by the "Niet" systematically used by the Soviet Union within the framework of its permanent duel with the West, the international organization is bound to be even more paralyzed by Red China's veto. The UN finds itself since in the same situation as the League of Nations when the Third Reich entered it. A somber omen indeed!

-From l'Aurore (Paris).

The seating of Mao's China is a twoedged sword. It makes the United Nations more representative. It also creates more opportunities for disruption and the veto. But the UN has always worked on the basis that conflicts exist in the world outside, and are reflected at the UN, and not vice versa. If conflict exists it is better that it be discussed, ventilated, and possibly defused within the UN rather than explode beyond its walls. The real lesson of China's seating is that the United Nations has formally recognized that the age of bi-polarity in super-power diplomacy is over. We now live in an age of triangles,

-From the Guardian (London).

Could this be a turning point for China as much as it will be for the United Nations? It would be foolish as well as mistaken to underrate the revolutionary idealism that fires China and will go on doing so-especially while Chairman Mao is at the helm. But in some part the revolutionary drive has been the stronger the more the national aims have been frustrated. At last China's meeting with the world has been settled. The result could be invigorating. It may even be beneficial.

> -From the Times (London). * * *

The expulsion of the Chinese Nationalists in the name of law and ethics is shocking and dangerous. Nothing will prevent any longer a majority of states from excluding any country from the international community under the pretext that it contradicts their designs. It is regrettable that a formula insuring the observance of the Charter's principles was not found. Politically, however, the decision to welcome People's China is quite logical.

-From Paris-Jour.

This does not mean that Washington is in any sense off the hook so far as the Taiwan problem is concerned. Nor has President Nixon any answer to the question of how to sever relations with the Nationalists without destroying the credibility of American policies elsewhere in Asia.

No U.S. President is likely to be able to beat a rapid retreat on the Taiwan issue and China, in its present mood, is not likely to expect such a development. What is probable is that China will become increasingly exacting in the terms for normalizing its relations with third countries so as to create a precedent for the eventual settlement with Washington.

PARIS.—Aside from the political question in connection with Spain and Cuba, there is the important economic difficulty to be dealt with, and there is a veritable war being waged between the dealers and consumers of Havana cigars. Back Across the Channel

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS.—British entry into the Common Market, one of the most important political events since World War II, became a certainty last year when Heath's Conservative government took power in the United Kingdom and Gen. de Gaulle died in retirement. The general had insistently blackballed the membership application of this continent's most important offshore island.

Heath unwaveringly championed the need to join "Europe" and it was certain he would put new energy into that scheme when he gained office, Already, France's opposition had begun to falter once Pompidou was elected presigeneral remained alive and capable of issuing public declarations that could have immense effect, tangible brakes existed on major changes in French policy.

De Gaulle held that Britain did not qualify as "European." He foresaw that as the Market's sixnation bloc gained strength the British would be forced to concentrate their energies on Europe at the expense of global and transatlantic commitments. But he also predicted this would take considerable time.

1961 Conversation

In early 1961 he told me: "Perhaps if the Common Market continues to grow Britain will be forced to change its policy." In 1962 he said: "The British would like to come in because they see the consequences to themselves if they don't; but there are enormous practical problems. I do not see them entering except after very prolonged negotiations."

In 1966, having personally vetoed Britain's chances, he added: Britain still thinks of itself as a world country and not a Continental country... Perhaps the British can change but the British are not great changers and I do not foresee that they will make any fundamental al-terations." Even in 1968 he insisted: "There must be an internal effort by the British to work more, to work harder and to cut public expenditures."

The general's skepticism outlasted that of almost every other European statesman and was also far more influential. Alone he was able to delay the step that has finally been taken by Eritain's Parliament. However, the moment he died, thus ending any possibility that he might oppose a new French policy on Britain, things began to move.

Pompidou's View

Within a fortnight Pompidou was privately predicting that Britain would definitely join the Market even though as many as two-thirds of the British people might oppose this drastic move. The new French president concluded that the English were by tradition far more governable than the French, and even if the majority of public opinion disliked a policy, they would accept it if their government so wished.

This is precisely what happened. All recent polls have confirmed that the ordinary English people oppose the decision taken by Parliament, but this did not prevent the move, one of the most fateful in British history since London relinquished the governance of Calais in 1558 Looking beyond the technical debates on the enabling legislation that must be drafted to com-

Progress has already been made toward acceptance of fair-and-square borders, and there is a start on the winding down of forces.

The Atlantic allies now take detente seriously, and they are no longer that worried about defense. They see opportunities for important economic, political and cultural business with the Communist bloc, and they believe the new Russian attitude has some-thing to do with emergence of Communist China.

In the UN voting, that attitude expressed itself with a vengeance. Apart from the authoritarian states which need American cover for a modicum of respect, the allies broke with Washington. The publisher of the magazine will be a corporation formed by Ms. Steinem and Elizabeth For ling Harris, vice-president of CRM, which publishes, among other magazines, Psychology Today.

In a statement, Ms. Steinem said that "women's publications still assume that the editorial emphasis must be on women's traditional roles. Ms. will be the first magazine for women who are exploring all their possibilities as full human beings."

"The name of the magazine was chosen to indicate this new freedom from traditional roles," according to Ms. Harris. "If Mr. is enough to indicate a male, whatever his marital status, then Ms. should be enough to indicate female."

The venture is a case of if you can't join them, try to beat them. Women's liberation groups have been strongly critical of traditional women's magazines for their editorial stances (which they claim are chauvinistic) and staffing biases (mostly toward

A statement of purpose for the magazine specifies that "traditional women's magazines are oriented to woman's dependent role." The editorial content of Ms, will "reflect women's rising awareness of their changing role."

Pasolini's 'Decameron'—A 'Splendid' Work

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS, Oct. 28 (IHT) .-- If you had been asked to choose the director best qualified to make a movie of "The Decameron," it is unlikely that you would have thought of Picr Paolo Pasolini. Pasolini's recent efforts have lacked both a sense of humor and a sense of the ridiculous.

Nevertheless, he has extracted splendidly satisfying film from Boccaccio's pages. It has just re-placed Tsti's "Traffe" at the Gaumont Champs-Elysées where its run will probably rival that of its popular predecessor.

Pasolini, recovering his wit and ingenuity in full measure, has taken a series of tales from the saucy source book and divertingly molded them into film form. His selection is sufficiently varied to hint at the original's range. Bawdy anecdotes—such as that of the sturdy gardener who be-comes a convent favorite—siternate with more lyrical amours. There is earthy rough-and-tumble buffoonery in the tricked horse-dealer bumpkin who would be a man-about-town in Naples; tragic romance and, in the finale, a sudden burst of good news when glad tidings are received from on high that sex is not a sin after adaptor that Pasolini shines. His dramatization, in addition to its grand entertaining, reflects the primitive innocence of the early Renaissance when the world, awakening from its Dark Age slumber, felt the pleasant tickle of spring sunshine. There is a radiant Botticeili joyfulness to the production, quickened by the simplicity of the performances and the subtle employment of color and costuming.

The director has caught both the robust humor of Boccaccio in flavorsome comedy and the atmosphere of that happy time. Pasolini himself plays Giotto at work on a church fresco, spokesman, too, for the joy of

"Le Casse" (at the Ermitage, the Boul' Mich and the Normandie) is a pulp magazine thriller about cops and roboers set in an unidentified exotic city of the Near East. The moral of the scenario appears to be that theft and murder do pay. The only other lesson it teaches is that it is unwise to open a door before one is aware who is on the other side. Had the guardian of the emeralds realized this at the film's start, there would have been no film, an omission over which Thespis would not have wept.

"The Devils" (at the Marbeuf in English) is a flamboyant vul-garization of John Whiting's adaptation of Aldous Huxley's account of religious persecution in 17th-century France and of a crippled mother superior, who, enraged by the indifference of a worldly priest, bears false witness against him.

Only a scene or two of the Whiting dramatization—those in which the lustful priest converses with a novice nun—have been preserved and the dialogue else-where seems to have been written for musical comedy. "Bye, bye, blackbird," exclaims Louis XIII as he fires his pistol at a Huguenot prisoner. The scheming Richelieu appears to have wandered in from a London farce, Oliver Reed is impressive as the condemned churchman. The Marignan and the Paramount Montparnasse are devoting this week to new Soviet films, their programs changing daily. Three of these, offered for the coming weekend, are of particular interest: The screen version of Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya," a film based on Katayev's "12 Chairs" and "Flight," a superbly acted adaptation of the Bulgalkov novel, seen at the Cannes festival last

That wistful, engaging panto-minist, Harry Langdon, is with us this week in "The Strong Man," revived at the Studio Marigny, but, alas, without ac-companying music. Made in 1926, this mute mixture of slapstick and sentimental romance was one of Frank Capra's early films and remains one of his best, retaining, after more than 40 years, most of its mirth and pathos. It shares the bill with a resurrected Buster Keaton three-reeler, "Pale Face." The two constitute a pleasing

The following are extracts from the text of the annual statement to shareholders, dated October 7, 1971, by the Chairman of Roan Consolidated Mines Limited. Mr. Dominic C. Mulaisho.

On June 30, 1971, Roan Consolidated Mines Limited completed the first full financial year of its existence. Sadly, the most significant event of that year was the alamitous accident at Mufulira mine on September 25, 1970, in which 89 men perished, and much of the mine's received from within Zembia and abroad which went far beyond sincere expression of sympathy and included substantial Insterial assistance for the bereaved families.

The long, difficult and costly process of rehabilitation began at once and has continued ever since. The dedication of Mufulira's staff has resulted in better progress than at one time was thought possible. Nevertheless, the mine's finished production will for many months yet Continue to be barely half the monthly rate of 16 000 tonnes we had hoped to achieve.

A commission of inquiry into the Mufulira accident was appointed by His Excellency the President on September 28, and in view of the gravity and urgency of the subject, the Minister of Mines and Mining Development was able on February 17 to authorize the publication of an interim report on the causes and effects of the accident. This report showed that the practice of pouring concentrator tailing into depressions on the hanging wall side of the orebody started as far back as 1933, but that it was not until 1963 that It was decided to fill the depressions with tailing in order to prevent the accumulation of rainwater and to seal the area. A sinkhole developed beneath the surface accumulation of tailing, and through this over a million tonnes of tailing, rock and soil rushed into the mine.

The report recommended that the Ministry of Mines and Mining Development should take an active part in planning the resumption of production and in reviewing the mining methods used at Mufulira, The report emphasized that the tragedy was neither human-engineered nor could any one individual have exercised any control over the inevitable conclusion once the causes had been set in motion.

The final report, which will probably be made public prior to this statement, ■Upports the general conclusions and recommendations of the interim report. In brief, the recommendations are that the rehabilitation programme proposed by the company be accepted: certain organizational changes be made in the government mines department so that it can assume additional and wider responsibilities: that further studies of surface subsidence throughout the Copperbelt be continued: that the management system at Mufulira be reviewed to provide more formal and regular discussions between management and technical departments with written records kept: that greater promotion of free exchange of ideas between Copperbelt mines be pursued, and that experience from outside is welcomed and utilized: that new regulations with regard to waste disposal be legislated: and that all personnel should carry some resistant type of identification while

OPERATING RESULTS

Production and Sales Finished copper production in the year ended June 30, 1971, was 250 355 tonnes, the lowest since the year ended June 1967. Production was well maintained at all mines except Mufulira as shown in the figures of recoverable copper in mine production. (See table.)

e Production	in Tonnes
	1970/71	1969/70
Mufulira	75 344	166 262
Luanshya	101 790	101 864

Chambishi	32 797	24 412,
Kalengwa	10 466	4 154
	245 078	321 665

During the year, 258 103 tonnes of Copper were sold at an average realization price of K822 per tonne. Sales exceeded finished production, which in turn process stocks.

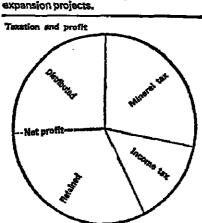

Cobalt hydroxide filter cake containing 922 tonnes of cobalt produced from Chibuluma concentrates at Chambishi was sold to Nchanga Consolidated Copper Mines Limited.

Finished production from mines (sech unit represents 10 000 toques gazzed)

The net after-tax profit of the company for the year ended June 30, 1971 was K48-8 million, out of which K22-6 million has been transferred to a reserve for capital expenditure, KO-5 million to debenture stock redemption reserve and K3·7 million to general reserve. The balance of K22 million has been made available for distribution to shareholders.

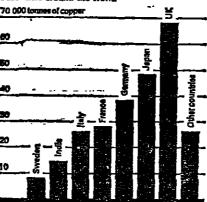

Three equal quarterly dividends of K0-40 per share gross (KO-22 net after tax) were declared in November 1970 and in February and May 1971. The fourth quarterly dividend of K0-12 (K0-066) was declared in September 1971 and took into account the currently lower copper price and the heavy capital expenditure programmes, in particular for the development of the Luanshya (Baluba) and Chambishi expansion projects, and the rehabilitation of Mufulira mine.

Negotiations are in progress for loan finance to cover the major part of the

COPPER MARKET Copper prices for the year ended June 30, 1971 were down from the levels of the previous year by about a third. London Metal Exchange prices continued to fluctuate, with the average cash sellers tonne in July 1970 to £421 in January and rising again to £477 in March and ending the financial year at £448. The price peaked above £500 again in July this year but has since reached the lowest level for four years and at the time of writing is £416 pertonne.

The possibility of a world surplus in copper production capacity has been of concern to the industry for some years, and during the past year, a moderate excess of production over consumption has developed, partly due to the world-wide findustrial recession.

OPERATIONS

Mufalira Division The consequences of the accident at Mufulira were felt throughout the year. Although a great deal has been achieved, a large amount of rehabilitation work still remains to be done. Following the accident, work was Initially directed towards preventing flooding of the mine. Protective concrete bulkheads and temporary pumping systems were installed and it became possible to return to limited production. Authority to resume mining by caving methods under the western end of the No. 3 tailings dam has been given and stoping has commenced. In the affected area of the mine a support method of mining, utilizing, sand filling, will be used. By January of this year it had become possible to use the Prain rock hoisting shaft and No. 14 shaft at the western end of The mine for hoisting, and a production rate of just over 5 000 tonnes of coppera month

Since then, efforts have mainly been directed towards the rehabilitation of the Peterson sharts in order to handle ore from the deeper eastern end of the mine. Limited hoisting of ore through one of the Peterson shafts began early in October, and by the end of the month, the second shaft should also be available for ore hoisting. resulting in an increase in the production rate to about 8 000 tonnes of copper a

The rehabilitation work, particularly the installation of emergency pumping systems, had to be undertaken in the face of the greatest difficulties, and full credit is due to the efforts of all concerned. Luanshya Division in February an agreement was reached whereby Roan Consolidated Mines Limited acquired the Baluba orebody as part of the Luanshya

Expenditure on this project should, over the next eight years, total about K34 million, based on present-day costs. Production is planned to begin in 1973 and should reach an annual rate of 22 000 tonnes by the second half of that year, bringing the total output at Luanshya to nearly 120 000 tonnes of copper a year. Later, as output from the older sections of the mine starts to decline, production from this area will be increased to 50 000 tonnes

Mining at Baluba will be by open stoping methods and a ramp from the surface will be used to take large mechanical loaders underground to a depth of 600 metres. The concentrator is being extended to deal with the additional throughput but no extensions are planned for the smelter as the existing capacity will be sufficient. Chibuluma Division Following a decision of the board in November 1970, devalopment of underground mining at Chambishi will increase the mine's output to about 48 000 tonnes of copper a year during 1973. When the open pit is fully mining alone will have increased to 48 000 tonnes annual capacity.

In order to make the best use of concentrator capacity at Mufulira and thus to offset losses as much as possible, special efforts have been made at Chambishi to accelerate ore production, which reached a record figure during the financial year and continues at a high level. Similarly, at Chibuluma mine, although Nome shaft was out of commission for three months while It was being re-equipped, production was fully maintained.

At Kalengwa, a concentrator with a designed capacity of 600 tonnes a day began operating in March. Prospecting The company's prospecting operations have been mainly in areas near Kalengwa mine and on the Copperbelt, and are largely directed towards the extension of knowledge of existing prebodies or mineralized ground. During the year 10 million tonnes of ore were added to the Chambishi mine reserves.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

Industrial relations are good, and this is & tribute to the leadership of the Mineworkers' Union of Zambia as much as to management skills. There was only one significant stoppage, when underground heavy equipment drivers at Luanshya were on strike for a week.

CONCLUSION

I should like to record the excellent spirit which has prevailed in all sections of your company and the mining industry, as a whole, Relations between Government, Mindeco (the controlling shareholder), management and employees have justified great confidence in the company's future.

We have less grounds for optimism about the immediate financial outlook. Not only have we lost a very large amount of copper production, but the price received for our copper has considerably fallen from its previous high levels. However, the mining industry must look to the long-term trends in world consumption rather than to the short-term fluctuations of a daily market. Our plans are therefore unaltered in that we shall spend about K75 million in the next few years in raising the production of copper from Luanshya to 120 000 tonnes a year, and of Chambishi to 48 000 tonnes a year.

'Psychology of Inflation' Not Defeated, Poll Reveals

By Michael Stern

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (NYT).—Evidence is mounting that a principal goal of President Nixon's economic program—breaking what Treasury Secretary John B. Connally has called "the inflationary psychology"—is not being achieved.

A Gallup poil released recently shows that 63 percent of the people expect prices to continue to rise in the next six months. Only 34 percent believe prices would hold at present levels or fall. The poll, which questioned a sampling of 1,506 adults in 300 communities around the country this month, corresponds to the findings of an earlier national sampling by the Census Bureau in September which found that only 33 percent of the people believed the Aug. 15 price freeze had stopped the upward march of prices.

Another indicator was the sharp rise in the number of complaints about alleged freeze violations reported by the New York region of the Office of Emergency Preparedness— 700 in the week ended Oct. 12 to 1,100 in the week ended Oct. 19.

The sources of this widespread skepticism are not hard to find. One is the failure of most retailers to maintain lists of legal ceiling prices for customers, leaving consumers with no base lines against which to check their suspicions that prices are continuing to go up.

Another source of skepticism is the ambiguous performance of the consumer price index in September, the first full calendar month of the freeze. The index, the most widely watched indicator of what is happening to prices, rose 0.2 percent in the nation and 0.5 percent in the New York metropolitan area.

Some economists and officials of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which prepares the index, said the rises indicated apparent violations of the freeze. Others asserted that the dex really was an imperfect measure of the effectiveness of the freeze because it measures movements of both controlled and uncontrolled prices.

The 100 Pipers Legend.

Our legend claims if you sip a perfect Scotch you'll hear 100 pipers play. That's a lot of Pipers. But then 100 Pipers is a lot of Scotch.

100 Pipers Scotch Whisky. Bottled in Scotland. Created with the skill that has made Seagram the world's largest distiller.

Shearson, Hammill & Co. Incorporated, founded in 1902, ranks among the ten largest US security firms with 1,100 investment executives in 64 offices serving more than 100,000 active clients throughout the world.

Shearson emphasizes securities research supporting a staff of 30 professional analysts with a budget of more than $1,500,000. Individuals and institutions have entrusted almost $200,000,000 to the investment management services of Shearson.

New Issues

Shearson is among the top US investment banking firms in terms of the dollar value of equity offerings managed. In the first nine months of 1971, Shearson has managed 20 public offerings of equity issues.

Operations

Shearson employs approximately 750 persons to process customers' orders and maintain appropriate records of their accounts.

Shearson was among the first to apply computerised technology to the brokerage industry in the early sixties. The firm's two CDC 3300's are capable of handling four times present volume.

Shearson customers have $1,500,000.000 of their securities in its safekeeping.

Robert van Tuyl, Chairman Alger B. Chapman Jnr, President

International - 25 Years Shearson was one of the first New York stock exchange member firms to establish a full service branch in Europe, in Basel in 1946. An International Division has been established with responsibility for all brokerage operations outside North America. This Division is headed by Warren K. McOmber, First Vice President, and is backed by a New York staff of research and operation specialists whose duty it is to support the international branch offices with the full range of Shearson services available from its headquarters at 14 Wall Street.

All international offices receive research and other information simultaneously with US branch offices. International division offices are located in Basel, Frankfurt, Milan (Agency), Lausanne and London.

International Banking

US and International companies are assisted in obtaining capital through public offerings and private place-ments at the most favourable terms in all markets outside the United States. Under the direction of Michael Palmer, First Vice President, this London-based operation is also active in arranging international mergers. direct investments (venture capital) and providing financial advice to corporations.

SUMMER HOUSES IN ITALY? NOW'S THE TIME TO LOOK.

Right now-out of season-this is the time to go house-hunting. Here are a few of the mediumpriced properties we are offering in Italy.

'Il Vente Verde" Four elegant contemporary villas, above the Mediterranean, at Sperlonga. Each has huge terraces, glass-walled living room, 4 bedrooms. One has its own swimming pool, No. 10,201.

"Seaside Villa at Capo Galera." On its own peninsula near Alghero, Sardinia, this 11-room hideaway is far from the beaten tourist path. All stone and glass, it overlooks the sea in complete privacy. No.

The diagramed deal from the 1971 world championship play in Taipel gave the Dallas Aces a profit, thanks to good bidding by Bob Goldman and Mike Lawrence.

Goldman, as North, bid very strongly, hinting at slam pos-abilities despite the fact that his partner had passed originally. Once the bidding revealed that his partner held club length and about 10 points in high cards, North made a cue-bid in East's heart suit, bid spades and fi-nally jumped in clubs. Lawrence judged that the hands fitted perfectly, and continued to six

East made a Lightner double, perhaps hoping for a spade lead, although that would not have helped the defense as it turns out. But the double suggests a lead in dummy's first suit, so West led a diamond

Lawrence won with the ace in dummy and led the heart jack. East put up his ace and shifted to a trump, but South had no trouble: He cross-ruffed to dispose of his remaining heart Without the double, West might have led a trump, the only lead to give the declarer any trouble. South would then have had to choose between playing to ruif two diamonds in his hand and one heart in dummy, after which trump leads would squeeze East in the major suits. Or he could have ruffed spedes twice in his hand, and one heart in dummy. As it happers, this play brings down East's king of spades, but South would have been as safe if West held the spade king: The run of South's trumps would eifect a double squeeze. West would have to keep the spade king and East the master heart, so both defenders would have to unguard

WHEN I WAS OLD

By Georges Simenon. Translated from the French be Eustis. A Helen and Kurt Wolff Book. Harcourt Jovanovich, 343 pp. $8.50.

preface to his journal, "for personal reasons, or for reasons I don't know myself. I began feeling old, and I began keeping notebooks. I was nearing the age of 60. Soon [he is writing in 1969] I shall be 67 and I have not felt old for a long time. I no longer feel the need to write in notebooks."

We come across, once again, the fabulous Simenon. The oneweek writing bouts in which he virtually locks himself in his study with some notes on the back of an envelope, then emerges with a completed novel; later, a few days to revise. This hap-pens four times annually—a lot of time left to be with his wife and children, run errands, play golf, read. The large house in Switzerland his great earnings, his friendships with Chaplin and Henry Miller, his long bout with alcoholism (now over, although he still considers himself an alcoholic), the time be lived on a houseboat with his first wife and their maid and traveled along all the rivers of France because he had a theory that a city's true face is toward the river, not the

His main purpose in publishing "When I Was Old" seems to be his declared one: explaining, but not enhancing himself so that ultimately his children will see him plain. His 10 1/2-year-old son says of his older brother, "I don't understand why Marc is getting married and going to live in Paris when he still has the chance to live X years with Daddy." Another father might beam at being so revered by a son, but Simenon wants to whittle himself down to the size of a man like any other man. "Isn't that," Simenon asks, "the best way to help them if they need help someday?"

Simenon's novels are built around passion, crimes of pas-sion, violence. The Simenon we meet in these notebooks abhors violence (Algeria, the Congo, Vietnam, the Cuban missile crisis were going on) and is a passionately devoted family man constantly trying to clear the decks to spend time with his young children and his second wife, whom he refers to as D. and who manages all his business affairs.

But, being Simenon, he is a family man with a difference. He deeply loves his wife but he is still subject to a lifelong com-pulsion to have sexual relations with every attractive woman he sees. Simenon's wife allows him perfect freedom. He doesn't say whether he thinks there is any connection between his sexual drive and his wife's inferiority feelings or her periodic depressions, or his own; he only explains it as another form of the same urgent need to strip away superficialities and conventions that we find in his writing. As revealed in these notebooks,

Soviet Analysts Criticize Petrosian

By Theodore Shabad

MOSCOW, Oct. 28 (NYT),— The atmosphere in Moscow's Central Chess Club was subdued last night as fans, hunched over boards, went over the moves in the latest game in Buenos Aires that gave Bobby Fischer of the United States the final victory over Tigran Petros'an and a chance to challenge Boris Spassky for the world title.

Commenting on Fischer's four victories that gave him a decisive 6 1/2 to 2 1/2 lead over Petrosian, a kibitzer waiting to join in a game said: "Pour games in a row, that's a little hard to take." Then, after pausing for a moment, he added hopefully, "But we've still got Spassky."

Throughout the round of games in the Argentine capital, Moscow chess fans have been debating moves and have been listening to the authoritative analyses of Soviet grandmasters in the blue stucco chess club building on Gogol Boulevard. Turning Point Landry added his play calling could be permanent." The ninth game, which gave the American the final victory Tuesday, is to be discussed this evening. But last night, some of the chess fans were already going over the moves, using a description of the game published on the back page of Izvestia, the government newspaper.

An analysis that accompanied the move-by-move rundown by Aleksandr Roshal, a prominent chess coach, described the sixth game, which was adjourned Oct. 17 after five hours and 42 moves. as the turning point in the match. Fischer won that game the following day.
"Today it can be said," Roshal wrote, "that the mood of the former world champion (Petrosian: was affected more than anything else by the sixth game. Its impact was felt through the remainder of the match."

Tischer Great' This analysis agreed with other comments in the Soviet press to the effect that Petrosian had not been able to pull himself to-gether after that defeat.

"But," Roshal continued, "We have to admit that we cannot blame just that fateful game. Pischer is a great chess phenom-enon. He possesses the rare combination of qualities that are essential for the struggle over that

"The extraordinary nature of his possibilities is demonstrated alone by the fact that he is the only foreign chess player, after a quarter of a century of domination by the Soviet grandmaster who has really come to grips with them in the fight for the world chess crown."

NCAA Rejects A Title Game For Football

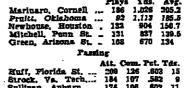

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 26 (UPI).—The National Collegiate Athletic Association Council has turned down a proposal to match the nation's No 1 and No. 2 college football teams in an early December television game,

The amendment, offered by the NCAA's television committee for a Hall of Fame game Dec. 9, 1972, and Dec. 8, 1973, was rejected for two reasons. The Council expressed concern that such a game would be disruptive to the academic programs of the institutions involved and would hurt the traditional bowl games.

Ad May Lose Amateur Status

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (UPI).-The appearance of Chris Evert, left, in the above ad, may have cost her her amateur tennis status, Bob Malaga, the executive director of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, said yester-day. But Malaga is not sure. He called the ad "just a monumental error."

For Chris Evert

Chris, the 16-year-old heroine of the Wightman Cup team and the "cinderella" of the U.S. Open where she reached the semifinals, and junior champion Laurie Fleming on the right, appear in a full-page advertisement in the current issue of the USLTA's monthly magazine. They are wearing dresses marketed by a shop in Chris's hometown of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the ad says the girls buy their clothes there and so should you.

"I flipped when I saw the ad." a shocked Malaga said yesterday. "Our magazine's advertising agency did not have to clear ad copy with us because, well, it's never been necessary. But when I saw this ad!" In the future, Malaga said, all such copy will be cleared through his office. Under the standing orders of the USLTA, it is a violation for an amateur to permit "his name or likeness to be advertised as the user of any goods of a manufacturer, merchant, wholesaler, retailer . . . or to allow the use of his name or likeness on sporting goods in any advertising or ripped off the last eight games in a row.

Newcombe, 27, hurt his right knee in the third game of the first set and after that favored the leg that has kept him out of tournament play since the U.S. Open at Forest Hills in September

"I felt the leg go and after that I was not prepared to take any risks," Newcombe said. "I'm not sure whether I'll go to Stockholm next week. I'll have to see if the leg acts up before making a final decision. The World Championship Tennis tour, of which Newcombe is a member, goes to Sweden this weekend. After today's match, Nastase, who beat Newcombe the last time they met, reaffirmed that he had intention of joining WCT. 'I could make more money by staying independent and I can still play in the Davis Cup for my country." Nastase said. Hewitt, who won the men's doubles yesterday with Frew Mc-Millan, had little difficulty in eliminating Ruffels, a first-round winner over U.S. Open champion Stan Smith.

In women's play, defending champion Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif... beat fellow Californian Patti Hogan of La Jolla, 6-3 6-0.

1-Year Probation Placed on UCLA

kabe and Hisashi Zusumura

KANSAS CITY Mo., Oct. 28 (UPI).-The University of California, Los Angeles, and North Carolina Central were reprimanded, censured and placed on one-year probation in separate actions yesterday by the National Collegiate Athletic Association Council.

The probations were without restrictions, meaning both schools will be eligible for post-season athletic competition.

UCLA's violation stemmed from the James McAlister case, announced Warren S. Brown, the NCAA's assistant director in charge of enforcement procedures. McAlister, a football player and trackman, was given his college board test on an un-authorized date. Brown further announced that the NCAA had found 63 erasures on McAlister's answer sheets after UCLA had declared him eligible.

McAlister loses a year of varsity eligibility, the council ruled.

The Leader's Digest

By Russell Baker

presidential election is only a year away and because every thoughtful American would probably like to know why it matters but is too busy watching football or TV talk shows to have time to read an elaborate explanation, here is an Abbreviated Capsule Watch - Pocket Child's History Digest of the Presidency.

Our first President was George Washington. rich establishment military leader, who is known as "The father of the military-industrial complex." Washington is famous for his uncomfortable false teeth. Washington was succeeded by John Adams, who is best known today for being the second President of the United States. Thomas Jefferson, our third President, not only founded the Democratic party, but also pulled one of the greatest real-estate coups in history by buying the Middle West from Napoleon for only $15 mil-

Jefferson was followed by Madison ("the father of Madison Avenue") and Monroe, author of the Monroe Doctrine, which is talked about even more and read even less than "Moby Dick." Monroe gave way to John Quincy Adams, who quickly gave way to Andrew Jackson.

Jackson had a terrible temper. but loved the people. He invited the public into the White House when he was inaugurated and they smeared cheese all over the fine furniture in the blue room, so that Mrs. Kennedy had to have the whole thing redecorated.

Politically, Jackson set the stage for Martin Van Buren. Van Buren was in over his head at the White House and hated because nobody could remember which President he was Everybody could name the first seven Presidents, but when people got to the eighth their minds went absolutely blank,

"Who is the President who comes after Jackson?" they would ask each other.
"Tippecanoe and Tyler too."

somebody would invariably suggest, but it was the wrong answer. After Van Buren, Tippecanoe

WASHINGTON Because the and Tyler too, Polk, Zachary Taylor, Millard Fillmore, Franklin Pierce and Zachary Scott in "Mildred Pierce" starting Joan Crawford, the next President was James Buchanan who, as every schoolboy will be bored to hear, is famous for being the President who preceded Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln is the best known of the famous Presidents and quickly became the inspiration for that great American descriptive phrase, "A real human being." Lincoln was truly a real human being,

After Lincoln things became very confusing. First Andrew Johnson was impeached. Then U.S. Grant, who was a good general but spent too much White House time smoking cigars, let Custer grow his hair down to his shoulder blades. Soon there was corruption, and everybody was growing hair and getting

All the men who didn't have long hair had gotten fat, and all those who hadn't gotten fat had grown long hair, and a lot of had done both, with the result that all the Presidents for years looked exactly alike.

Nobody could tell Rutherford B. Haves from what's-his-name Garfield or Chester A. Arthur. or Grover Cleveland from William Howard Taft. Benjamin Harrison was a constant problem. "Did you know we have a President named Benjamin Harrison?" grown men asked each other over the second martini. Nobody did. So they had to replace him with William McKinley, who didn't have a beard and wasn't very fat and could, therefore, be Having a President they could remember delighted Americans so much that they never again let anybody who was hairy or fat, except the above-mentioned Taft. hold the job. Instead they chose lean, smooth-shaven men who were fanatic about being remembered. Since such men are almost always terribly neurotic, this led to the 20th century age of controversial Presidents, about whom the less said the less controversy your Abbreviated Capsule Watch-Pocket Child's History of the Presidency will arouse. None of us wants any controversy, of course. Just give us greatness and leave us alone with the finetuning knob till the polls open.

In Berlin—'Nothing Is Permanent'

By Lawrence Fellows

BERLIN (NYT).—After a quarter of a century of almost constant crisis, a West Berliner has learned to cover his feelings with a layer of wariness, quick wit and an unfailing sense of making the best of worrisome circumstances.

"What silliness," said Ernst Nowka, a West Berlin clothing merchant. of East Germany's recurring efforts in negotiation to cut West Berlin loose from its ties with West Germany. He was not really worked up about the intra-German argument over the isolated Western sectors of this city.

"How can we stay excited?" Mr. Nowka asked. "We have been put through too many We cannot think of ourseives always as in a critical state. We have been living with this problem, taking the good and the bad as they come. Somehow, we have always managed to go ahead.

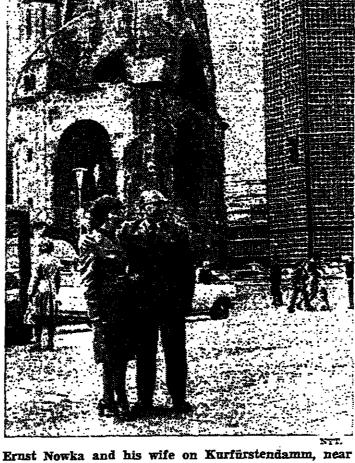

"Like drops of water on a hot stone," Mr. Nowka said of the promises the diplomats and politicians are holding out for marginal improvement in the troubled Berlin situation.

Like most Berliners, Mr. Nowka cannot get enthusiastic about the uneven course of the intra-German argument over West Berlin. The city is more than 100 miles inside East German territory, a fact of geography that weighs more heavily with him than the diplomatic maneuvers. Mr. Now-ka spoke of these as though he were watching a farce.

Characteristic

Mr. Nowka, 64. is a short. roundish man with thinning blond hair and he has a look of skepticism that is characteristic of the Berliner. But he has a quick smile.

As he walked his dog along a height near his house in Spandau, on the western edge of town, he stopped to ask a woman who was picking plums from a tree in her garden: "May I have a plum? It's my birthday."

bombed Kaiser Wilhelm Church. At right new church.

"Why not?" the woman re- ply to West Berlin or keep plied with a broad smile. She filled his hands with plums. "Nothin'g permanent in this world," the woman said. She and Mr. Nowka were complete strangers.

A high concrete wall, at the other side of the path, was part of their brief encounter. Neither looked at it.

The wall was started ten years ago by East Germany to keep East Germans from getting into West Berlin, after 3 million had fled from the Communist territory.

Besides keeping East Germans out of the Western enclave, the wall also locks West Berliners in. When the East Germans want to they can slow or stop the lines of sup-

West Berliners from leaving except by air.

But the wall has also given the West Berliners a kind of conviviality and esprit that show up best among people under siege. Berliners are said to have

"Schnauze." a sort of glipness or cheekiness. More often Berliners speak of one another as "kess"—possessed of Schnauze plus heart.

"It's a real pity for the peo-ple over there," said the Rev. Gerhard Bahrmann, who was strolling with Lir. Nowka. A retired Lutheran pastor, he came to Berlin from Leipzig, in East Germany, only five years ago. The Nowkas and the Bahrmanns are neighbors.

"What sort of government is it that cannot trust its own people?" he said. His wife said she had been refused permission by the East Germans to return home briefly for the funeral of her sister.

When the pastor reached retirement age, he was allowed to emigrate with his wife. As he pointed out, the policy does not diminish East Germany's labor force. It frees the Communist government from paying a pension, which the West German government pays. It relieves the pressure on housing. It also removes those who are older and inclined to be the least kindly disposed toward the Communist regime.

Youngsters

Michael Nowka is 19 years old and a freshman in college. intent on getting a degree in business administration. The wall was built through Spandau a year after the Nowkas

"It ail seems so remote," the youngster explained. "I'm not really curious about it, except perhaps to have a quick look on the other side. I'm much more interested in Western Europe and the United States." When someone is shot trying to get over the wall, Mi-chael considers it as a tragedy in human terms, but not as a thing involving him as a compatriot. Too much time ferences have crept between the Germanys. His sister, Dina, is 15 years old and interested only in horses. To Dina, the wall, the Berlin agreement and the many Berlin disagreements all belong to another generation.

Mr. Nowka's wife, Lilo, said: 'I grew up on the other side but I've lost contact with my friends over there. My father left a house over there.

"But I don't suppose I'll see the again," she said. "We've lost touch. It's another world

This is a lingering tragedy of the cold war. It will not be removed by the Berlin

PEOPLE:

Frank Sinaira's lawyers sued for $5 million yesterday alleging that a newspaper, Midnight, defamed the singer by falsely reporting that he has cancer. The lawsuit protested a purported May 10, 1971, headline in Midnight, published by a Canadian corporation and sold in the States that said, "Frank Sinatra Has Cancer," and the article accompanying it. Named as defendants with the Midnight Publishing Corp. were Fawcett Publications, Inc., and Manhattan News Co., Inc., U.S. and New York distributors, respectively, of the paper. The complaint also slieged that Sinatra was libeled by a Mid-night issue, dated Nov. 1, 1971, that had a headline, "Sinatra Married... He'll Be a Daddy March," and an article that said Sinatra "had been secretly married and that his alleged bride was pregnant." The complaint charged that the published material was malicious and recklessly disregarded truth. Sinatra was pictured as suffering "great mental pain and disturbance of his emotional tranquil-lity" and was "ireparably injured in his profession."

Crown Prince Victor Emmanuel of Italy denied yesterday that his father had stripped him of his claims to the throne because of his marriage to a Swiss biscuit heiress, the Italian news agency ANSA reported in Rome. The national circulation magazine Gente said Wednesday ex-King Umberio II, who has lived in exile in Portugal since Italy voted out the monarchy in 1946, an-nounced such a decision in a long telephone conversation with his

The story I was deprived of my rights of succession is doubly Victor Emmanuel told ANSA in a telephone convenation from Geneva. "Not only because I have had no telephone conversation with my father but also because the capacity of prince and helr of Savoy cannot be taken from me by anyone. I myself would have to renounce my rights."

Gente said Umberto had named 28-year-old Duke Amedee of Aosta, a member of the royal family's cadet branch, as his successor in Victor Emmanuel's place. Victor Emmanuel displeased his father when he married Marina Doria, a Swiss biscuit heiress and former world waterski champion, in a Roman Catholic rite in Tehran Oct. 7.
